timber species definitions

Material	Origin	Colour	Technical
MDF	Medium Density Fibreboard is an engineered timber product formed by the breaking down of softwood and woodchips into wood fibres similar to cotton wool, combining it with a wax and resin binder. Panels are then formed by applying high temperature and pressure. The panels have smooth surfaces on both sides and have an even density profile throughout which makes an ideal substrate to router, groove and profile.	Yellow to brown in colour with a smooth texture.	Primed MDF: The MDF architrave is coated with a primer sealant to make painting easier and help achieve a smooth finish. Moisture Resistant: Our Primed MDF architraves meet the highest Australian standards for moisture resistance.
